The feat of the spotted cows is surely Jacobs most outrageous magic performance. It is so big that, with the riches he scoops in from this one exploit, he lives the life of a prosperous independent man all the days of his life. Jacob grows rich by magic. God gives him the inspiration he needs to do it in a dream. Again we get a vivid demonstration of the interpenetrating boundaries of psi. The Bible contains action paintings of many of the highest magical adepts of the ancient stage, the best of the best being Moses, Elijah, Elisha, and, the consummate, Jesus. Youve heard of Moses parting the Red Sea. Thats magic. The Red Sea parts when Moses says certain magic words and passes his magic wand over it. And the Israelites pass the impassible boundary. By magic. In a similar event, except much, much smaller, the very first magic performance Elisha accomplishes independently (not as the sorcerers apprentice) is shortly after Elijah has ascended in a chariot of fire. Hes going back home, and comes to a river. He calls...
