O how sweet is sailing to heaven, when we are wafted along by divine influence, and freighted with humble love and holy zeal. Surely these were times of the Son of Man. Never was my bible more sweet, or my Saviour more precious, the Lord was my light and ray salvation, and I walked upon my high places. Perhaps, sir, you will say, that this was the true missionary spirit, and that into which every foreign missionary ought to be baptised. I am, however, sorry to say, that I was not always thus diligent on my different missionary stations: sometimes weakness of body, sometimes unbelief, and not unfrequently a desire after unprofitable knowledge, and curious and pleasing books and studies, would slacken my ardour, and repress the spirit of holy diligent exertion. I have before remarked, that a missionary to a foreign land should...
