The first effort, administered by Labor, provides training through skill grants. The second effort, administered by NSF, funds scholarships through universities to encourage low-income students to enter fields of computer science, engineering, and math. Of the total fees collected from employers wishing to use the H-1B program, Labor will receive 56. 3 percent for the technical skill training grants and NSF will receive 28. 2 percent for scholarships. The legislation provides other uses for the remaining 10 amounts. In the past, few accurate data have been made available about the jobs Jobs Filled by and filled by and characteristics of workers approved for H-1B visas. However, Characteristics of H-1B in 1999, for the first time, INS compiled information on key characteristics such as occupations, wages, degrees earned, and countries of birth from a Workers 11 statistical sample of new H-1B visa approvals. INS has now begun to regularly collect and analyze specific information on new H-1B workers, as well as renewals, as required under ACWIA. It still lacks important information on these workers, however, such as an accurate, unduplicated count of approved H-1B workers who actually enter the United States on an H-1B visa. In 1999, workers approved for H-1B visas were to fill a wide array of Demographics of Workers specialty occupations. As shown in fig. 3, 59 percent of the visas were for Approved for H-1B Visas workers slated to work in IT-related occupations, including the large 10 NSF will receive 4 percent for grants for math, engineering,...
